

I am against FCC causing internet service providers and VOIP companies to have to allow/enable wiretapping. There is sufficient technology readily available to the general layman to encrypt data being transmitted that would make forcing the allowance of wiretapping to be futile and useless. All this requirement would do is drive costs up with no measurable benefit to the general public.